Principal's Message

We've reached the end of Quarter 1, which means it is time for Parent-Teacher Conferences and distribution of first quarter report cards. This is truly a meaningful moment in our school year. It provides an opportunity to report on progress and work habits, as well as creating the chance to establish goals moving forward.

I've had parents ask what they needed to do coming into the conference, so I pulled together a few ideas. There are certainly other things to ask or talk about, but here are some basics that might be helpful as you prepare to meet with your child's teacher.

Before the conference:

- Ask your child how they feel about school, including favorite/least favorite topics or activities.
- Ask your child if there is anything that they want you to talk about with the teacher.

During the conference:

- Ask questions—we enjoy the interactive dialogue with parents, so please don't feel like it has to be one-sided. Here are a few good starters:
 - What are my child's strongest/weakest subjects?
 - Does my child hand homework in on time?
 - Does my child participate in class?
 - Does my child seem happy at school?
 - What can I do at home to help?

After the conference:

- Talk about the conference with your child.
- Highlight positive points and be direct about areas of concern.
- Talk about plans created with the teacher and let your student help formulate ways to meet new goals.
- Celebrate the positives and reset for the next grading period.

If the time provided for your conference doesn't work, please contact your teacher for a new time/date. Thank you for being part of this constructive process!
